What the Irish members have been predicting as the immediate result of the new policy, to which the Ministry is committed at the next ession of Parliament, is the collapse of Castle government. As soon as local government is reormed and remanded into the hands of the tenantry, it is believed that the whole system of administration will break down under its en weight. This assumption may be premature; but it is certainly true that a Viceroy is singled out in Dublin for affronts and cynical indifference against which members of the royal family would be adequately protected. It is The contended by Unionist journals that the office of Viceroy could be safely abolished, and that I The the Duke of Connaught or some other member of the royal family in permanent residence could exert a most salutary influence in reconlling the island to English rule. A proof of the utility of this suggestion is the fact that in order to secure a favorable reception for the Duke and Duchess of York, the Viceroy renained in the background, so as not to excite ationalist resentment and thereby to create unnecessary prejudice against royalty. Viceroy, as the official representative of Dublin Castle, would have been the least acceptable master of ceremonies who could have been Pess in named for the royal progress.

The dignity of monarchical institutions has to be maintained even when sovereigns are trying to themselves; yet royalty, while it disports itself, is also constantly at work, and adapts itself more or less effectively to its enand Oscar II, who have undertaken the difficult cork of reconciling jealous races, are adroit gav and successful. Nicholas II is thinking deeply and earnestly of the urgent reforms needed in his empire and seeking to convince his subjects that, although the heaven is high, the Czar is discretion, but he brings to bear upon European affairs a strong will, and does not allow the Triple Alliance to be broken up. The English princes, with their social prestige, have done much to popularize monarchy by commanding public respect and exciting loyal affection and interest. Despite the industry of Ministers and the legislative activity of Parliaments, full occupation remains for European princes, and their holidays are crowded with working hours. I. N. F.

NOTES OF THE STAGE.

There was a report yesterday of an intention on the part of four well-known and favorite actors to build a theatre in New-York for their own use. The actors were Nat Goodwin, William H. Crane, Fran-cia Wilson and Soi Smith Russell. Mr. Wilson said last night that Mr. Goodwin had approached him on the subject, and that he had repiled that when Mr. Goodwin had any definite plans to submit he ney, Dr. John L. Feeny and John T. Sutphin would consider the matter. He intimated, however, that he had no intention of entering into any such scheme, Mr. Berger, Mr. Bussell's manager, said scheme. All there are trussed a manager, said that some such project had been suggested, but that nothing definite had been done about it as yet. The general impression seemed to be that as yet the theatre was decidedly in the air. The house was to be, it is said, between Thirtieth-st, and Forty-second-st, the usual place for new theatres.

Miss Marie Lloyd is due here to-day on the Saale. She is to sing at Koster & Blal's. Joseph O'Mara, who sang here last season in "Shamus O'Brien" and is to sing this season in "The Highwaymen," at the Broadway Theatre, is on the same ship. Rehearsals of the chorus of the Damrosch Opera

Mr. McGuire, the labor man, had a long talk with Mr. Croker, and warned him that the great element of danger to Tammany this year lay in the George campaign. "I am thoroughly posted in this matter," said Mr. McGuire, "and I know that Henry George is a great deal stronger with the laboring man than he was in 1886. If you do not succeed in getting him out of the field, your Tammany prospects are ruined," Mr. Croker looked impressed, but said nothing.

Mr. Croker was asked last evening what he ticket?"

"I don't know," replied Mr. Croker, with a little cough. "I hope they will be practical men. The people of New York are tired of theorists and theoretical government." This last remark, it was generally conceded, could not have been intended to refer to Mr. Fitch. His administration of the Finance Department of this city has been regarded as eminently practical and far removed from the theoretical.

AND AND LOGIC THE CONVENTION.

ARRANGING FOR THE CONVENTION.

A caucus of the Democratic City Provisional Committee to arrange for to-night's City Convention at the Grand Central Palace was held in Room No. 332 of the Hoffman House last night, and continued until near midnight. John were among those present. While they were in session a report circulated through the hotel corridors that Nathan Straus, who was nominated for Mayor by the Tammany convention in 1894, but who declined to stay in the field in 1894, but who declared to east after a somewhat bitter correspondence with Senator Hill, was being seriously considered for the head of the ticket. "Croker is looking for a man who can furnish the sinews of war," was the explanation offered for Mr. Straus's reappearance in politics. No preminent leader would admit that Mr. Straus was on the list of possibilities.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The storm has remained nearly stationary in the East Gulf. An area of high pressure has remained nearly stationary off the Middle Atlantic and Middle Pacific coasts. The pressure is relatively high on the northern slope. Rain has fallen in Florida and on the Middle Gulf coast. The temperature has risen in the lake regions, the Middle Atlantic States, New-England and the plateau regions; has fallen in the Upper Missouri Vailey, and has remained stationary ciscohere. Fair weather may be expected in all districts, except showers in the South Atlantic States and the Middle cluif coast.

DETAILED FORECAST FOR TO DAY For the District of Columbia, New England, Eastern New-York, New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland, fair; warmer; southwesterly winds.
For West Virginia, Western New-York, Western Pennsylvania and Ohio, fair; warmer, light southerly winds.

The special train which brought the President here from Washington is taking him back. It consists of an engline and two cars of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the sleeping-car Haselmere and the baggage and passenger car Antony. The Haselmere will be occupied throughout the journey by Mr. and Mrs. McKinley, Attorney-General McKenna. Miss McKenna, Miss Maboel McKinley and George Cortelyou, executive clerk to the President.

The President expects to arrive at Washington about noon to-morrow. The route of the trip will be by the Boston and Albany to North Adama, the Fitchburg to Troy, the West Shore to Jersey City, and the Pennsylvania Railroad to Washington.

to Washington.

The Presidential party left Adams in a blaze of red fire. Two bands furnished music and about three thousand people were present to witness the departure. The special train was backed down the track to a piace in front of the Plunkett house at 10 o'clock, and in a few minutes the party had boarded it. When the President and Mrs. McKinley appeared they were wildly cheered. The President stood on the platform with his hat off bowing his farewell to the people.
